PROFESSOR JOSEPH CREA

DEDICATION

At the end of the last class of a course, it is customary for students to applaud their professor as a measure of their appreciation and respect. Professor Joseph Crea has always told his students to save the hand clapping and to put the applause on their final exams. It was his way of saying that his reward was in a demonstration of his students' understanding of the subject matter.

Professor Crea has taught many subjects during his years at Brooklyn Law School, from Evidence to Torts, and from Criminal Law to Corporations. They are years which have undoubtedly been filled with reflection and reminiscing by Professor Crea over a long and fruitful career. His tenure has also brought him into the lives of many students, practicing lawyers, judges, and fellow law professors.

We, the students of the class of '85, had the privilege of Professor Crea's tutelage during one of his last years as a teacher at Brooklyn Law School. We have learned the law he taught in a special way. Through Professor Crea's use of countless illustrations and personal experiences we learned the law as it lives, as it works, and as it changes over time — in short, how the "barrel always rolls."

Professor Crea's famous expressions and one liners are not mere niceties accumulated over the years and used to extract a chuckle or retain the attention of his students. They are seminal lessons that have withstood the test of time; they are lessons that the practitioner should not be without. While they are unlikely to appear in judicial opinions, it is likely that Professor Crea's astute observations of historical trends and human nature will often serve to explain the fickle course of jurisprudence.

We are grateful to Professor Crea for his perseverance and dedication, for his insights and vivacity, and for his encouragement. We are better for his influence. Professor Joseph Crea, we salute you and wish you well.

P.S.C. '85

IN MEMORIAM STEVEN A. BROWN 1949-1984

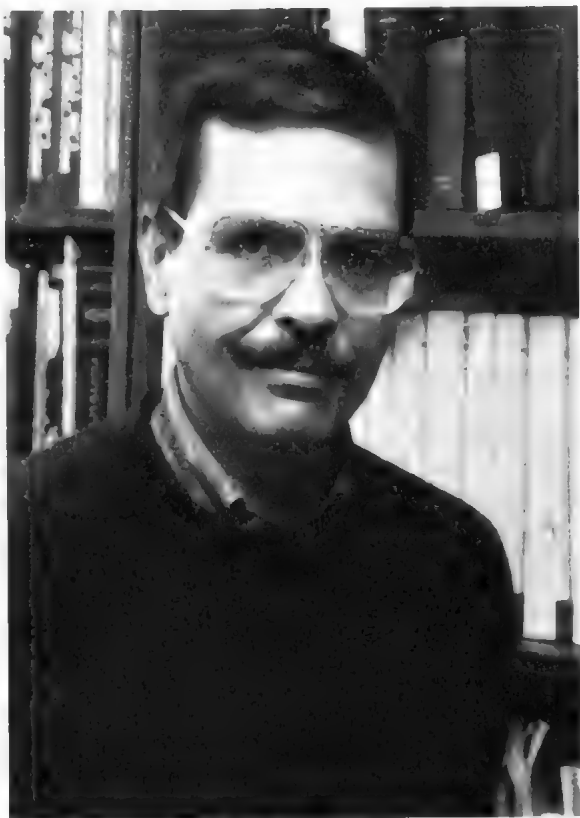

Our lives are permeated with books. From our first days we sought the knowledge and stories that they contained. Throughout our years as law students, books are an ever present companion, and they will continue to be so when we begin our lives as lawyers. In a certain way, it is fitting that we create a book to chronicle our years at Brooklyn Law School. In the story that fills the book of our lives, we all began on the same page three years ago. Although we have not always read the same chapters of that book, this book shows that we ended in the same place. This yearbook directs special tribute to the memory of one of our classmates who put his book aside before the story was over. That person was our friend, Steve Brown.

It would be a lot to say that Steve was a fine student and scholar, a devoted son and brother, a dedicated union member, and a concerned Zionist. But it would not be enough. Steve was a sincere and honest person, interested in the world around him, modest in his ways, and concerned about the welfare of others.

We are filled with a great sadness and his passing leaves us smaller, weaker, and less courageous. But the life of such a person does not go unrewarded. He brought us joy and insight. We are richer and stronger for having known him, and we are glad that he was a part of the story of our lives.

"The precepts of the law are these: to live honorably, to injure no other man, and to render to every man his due."
